

Table of Contents

Preface: What is at Issue?	v
Remarks on the Method and the Manner of this Book	xii

Chapter I: On Imagining	1
I.1 Ryle on imagining	2
I.2 Dennett (and Ryle) on imagining	11
I.3 Bennett&Hacker on imagining	20
I.4 Husserl on imagining	34
I.5 Wittgenstein (in contrast to Husserl) on imagining	59

Appendix to Chapter I: The German originals of the quotations from Husserl and Wittgenstein in Chapter I, and remarks on matters of translation	90
--	----

Chapter II: On Knowing the Inward Mental Life	103
II.1 Against privatism and eliminativism	103
II.2 Subjective and intersubjective knowledge of the inward mental life	116
II.2.1 Ryle and Wittgenstein against introspection (reflexive experience)	120
II.2.2 Wittgenstein's argument against knowledge of the inward mental life	149
II.2.3 Wittgenstein and Gorgias	165
II.3 The true nature of consciousness, and its true epistemological consequences	172
II.3.1 The root of Wittgensteinianism	200
II.3.2 Knowing one's own mind and the minds of others	209
II.4 Coda: the second-person point of view	219

Appendix to Chapter II: The German originals of the quotations from Husserl and Wittgenstein in Chapter II, and remarks on matters of translation	226
--	-----

Chapter III: On Intending	247
III.1 A prologue: epoché	247
III.2 Technical intentionality-predicates	248
III.3 The great divide in intentionality theory — first part: Ryle (and Wittgenstein) versus Husserl	251
III.3.1 Rylean Husserl and non-Rylean Husserl	266
III.3.2 Does Husserl's theory of intentionality lead to idealism?	279
III.4 The great divide in intentionality theory — second part: Wittgenstein versus Husserl	290
III.4.1 In corroboration of the thesis that Wittgenstein is an intentionality nihilist	306
III.5 Dennett's nihilism regarding intentionality	315
III.6 Bennett&Hacker's nihilism regarding intentionality	325
III.7 The Wittgenstein-syndrome in the theory of intentionality	331
III.8 Wittgenstein's profundity	347

Appendix to Chapter III: The German originals of the quotations from Husserl and Wittgenstein in Chapter III, and remarks on matters of translation	351
--	-----

Chapter IV: On the Literature	361
IV.1 Husserl without introspection?	361
IV.2 On the difficulty of saying the phenomenological truth in the best possible way	374
IV.2.1 Thompson on reflexive (or reflective) experience, inner experience, introspection	374
IV.2.2 Thompson on representationalism	385
IV.2.3 Thompson on imagining	389
IV.3 Was Husserl an externalist?	396
IV.4 Husserl's theory of intentionality misinterpreted	419
IV.4.1 The Bell does not toll for Husserl's theory of intentionality ...	434
IV.5 Four views of a Wittgensteinian	444
IV.5.1 The first view (concerning introspection)	444
IV.5.2 The second view (concerning Anscombe's mistranslation of "Vorstellung" and, allegedly, of "Bild")	447
IV.5.3 The third view (concerning the intentionality of imaginings) .	450

IV.5.4	The fourth view (concerning the ontological and epistemological status of imaginings)	454
IV.6	Among the blind, the one-eyed is king	460
IV.7	Referentialism and anti-referentialism	466
IV.8	Husserl and the Clash of the Four Giants	470

Appendix to Chapter IV: The German originals of the quotations from Husserl and Wittgenstein in Chapter IV, and remarks on matters of translation	483
--	-----

Bibliography	493
---------------------------	-----

Index of labelled quotations from Bennett&Hacker, Dennett, Husserl, Ryle, and Wittgenstein	500
---	-----

Index of other quoted authors	507
--	-----